President's Message

By Patricia Scott, President

Scott Brown gave Republicans all over the country a lot to cheer about. If it can happen in Massachusetts, it can happen here in California and other Democratic strongholds.

One GOP Woman's Opinion

Obama's "state of the union" was as many of his speeches in "community activism" mode. This President is deaf and has tunnel vision—let the people be damned. Is this President setting himself up to be FDR by disparaging the Supreme Court (FDR wished to stack court)? More than likely because of this bold move "Democrats no matter what" will elevate him to higher esteem than the one he himself holds.

Virginia Governor Bob McDonnell's rebuttal or as I believe, introduction to the nation, presented conservative solutions in an encouraging manner. Definitely Governor McDonnell appears to be a "person of interest" and deserves notice.

Let love be the lamp to guide your way
 When all seems dark as night;
 Let love be the key to every door

 No tear too wet to wipe away,
 No heart too cold to feel.
 Let love shine through so all may see,
 Let love shine clear and bright!
 True love is such a magic thing
 It gives us...second sight.

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

By: Camille Giglio, Legislative Co-Chairman and CFRW Statewide Legislative Analyst

MASTERY OF MANIPULATION - M.O.M.

President Obama's State of the Union address last night was a MOM moment. It reminded me of a dinner menu - an appealing pre-entree, a nice dessert and a lot of gravy to cover up the main course in the event it was hard to swallow.

But, swallowing the main course of centralized management and direction of everyone's life is Obama's goal. Like a rich meal that could clog the arteries, this main course could clog your conscience rendering you incapable of recovery.

It was a masterpiece of psychological conditioning regarding the government's role in social and political activities. It fit the outline offered by Paul E. Rondeau Researcher in the subconscious marketing and delivery of change www.culture-of-life.org.

Rondeau lists three stages of manipulation: 1) desensitization, 2. jamming, 3 conversion of the mind.

Desensitization: Obama started off, as usual, by suggesting that people are suffering the current set backs because the government, especially the Republicans, in the last 10 years, stopped assisting the people. He, Obama, would restore the necessary government assistance.

Obama went so far as to openly criticize the U.S. Supreme Court in its latest decision regarding campaign contributions. He received a small standing ovation from the Democrats for that. That's a form of public humiliation which is a part of desensitization.

Jamming: This was the main event for Obama. He blamed everything on the private sector, offered a picture of a better world brought about by "green" jobs, clean air, world class education, i,e, global citizenship and rebuilding the infra structure order of our country. Big-Banking is now the enemy of the people. they will be taxed and the money realized will be given to small banks (now the good guys) to be given out to the little guy to grow small businesses which, by the way, will be directly under the watchful eye of a nanny government.

Obama's emotional appeal created by a softening and huskiness of the voice, the gravy's seasoning, was created by saying he didn't want our country to "become a second place country." Whatever that means?

His idea of improving education is to install the federal Race To The Top education mandates across the country, denying local involvement to parents, creating consortia of states (regionalization - Executive order Order 13528, signed 1/14/2010) providing a world class education which will bring success to every child allowing to be productive.

Our idea of a world class education and Obama's idea are not the same. He spoke of a child's success being tied to a child's potential not a zipcode. This is a good example of conscience clogging. We all want our kids to be successful, but the future approach to school placement according to abilities may mean separating the child from the family. The recently passed state Race To The Top legislation calls for open enrollment in any school across the state. Heavy emphasis being placed on science and technology training and health care. That reflects the UN core standards for education. Another bill calls for giving the school officials the final word on where a student will get his education.

Conversion of the mind: This will remain to be seen, but political correctness, silencing the opposition and forced compliance through legislating change is the whipped cream on top of the dessert. One of the results of conversion will be removal of all conscience clauses from the health care field. That's paramount in a California bill by San Francisco's Tom Ammiano, AB 535, Death Review Panels.

It is time Barbara Boxer and others started looking for a new job. This is an important election year because dissatisfaction with the current administration, including Congress, is mounting. Many independents, and Democrats too, who were caught up in the Obama frenzy, have realized this is not the "change" they thought they were voting for. The changes that are taking place in our Nation's capital are frightening. Once the primary elections are over, we will have to work hard to get out the vote and build support for our Republican candidates.

Tom Del Beccaro, the California Republican Vice Chairman, is hosting a fundraiser to benefit the Contra Costa Republican Party on March 30th at the Veteran's Hall in Lafayette. The special guest will be Karl Rove. I hope many of you will attend. More information will be in next month's newsletter.

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

By: Liz Froelich, Legislative Co-Chairman

Have you noticed the new so-called transit village arising near #680 on Treat Blvd. next door to the BART station in Pleasant Hill? Wonder how many of these residents will have cars and need to get on the road and not on BART. This will significantly impact other area commuters who will be wasting gas, as they work their way to #680 in very slow mode.

How about the move to require shopping centers, stores, businesses to charge for parking with the state government handing out tax breaks to businesses who fall for this attempt to discourage travel by car and reduce carbon emissions? At the same time bridge fees and BART fees will be higher.

Now the latest in the green revolution: "Toilet to Tap" recycling. San Diego City Council has been seriously considering this possibility, although Mayor Jerry Sanders did veto a demonstration project in 2007. According to www.sandiegonewsroom.com (1/29/10) the San Diego City Council voted 5-3 to approve a $3.28 million contract this week to fund a public outreach campaign that will educate residents on the benefits of using recycled wastewater. This program could spread north to our cities!!

Transit villages, smart growth, greening of cities, greenhouse gas reduction, redevelopment – terms mentioned in previous reports over the past years. The camel's nose got under the tent with laws creating transit villages.

Since 1994 California has operated under a Transit Village Development District law which

8) Requires a two-thirds voter approval of the formation of the IFD (Infrastructure Financing District) and the issuance of bonds.

9) Requires majority voter approval for setting the IFD's appropriations limits.

AB 987 (Ma-D) Transit Village Development District financing bill would remove this voter approval for the IFD, the issuance of bonds, and the infrastructure financing plans.

This bill would expand the jurisdiction of a Transit Village to ½ mile, instead of ¼ mile. One previous bill cited educational facilities as proper use in the transit village zone. Originally the transit village concept was to improve blighted areas. However, in subsequent bills this designation kept changing and expanding.

Governor Arnold vetoed a similar bill last year because of budget delays and vetoed the 08 version because he believes that citizens should vote on the establishment of IFD which could increase taxes.

AB 987 passed the Assembly 1/27 and will be heard in the Senate. All Republican Assembly persons voted NO. Assemblyman Torlakson was listed as Not Voting. Assemblywoman Buchanan voted YES.

ACTION: Call Senator De Saulnier and urge him to oppose AB987 and imposition of taxes without voter approval.

Judging Alito – Obama's Ultimate Arrogance

By: Thomas G. Del Beccaro,

www.politicalvanguard.com

President Obama's State of the Union obviously was a first in more than one way. Obama point blank, called out (to use the modern vernacular) our Supreme Court Justices on national TV. He did so because he politically disagreed with their legal decision. In doing so, Obama demonstrated his supreme arrogance – and let America know just how far he is willing to go to get his way.

As we know, our Federal Judicial system is one of three separate but equal branches. Historically, the judiciary has been the least political of the three branches. That status reaches well beyond our own system. Prior to judges and courts, civilizations tended to rely on counsels of elders to pass judgment on the actions of their village or tribe. Those elders held a special place, as dispensers of wisdom, in their societies.

The roles of judges today evolved from those wise elders. Importantly, our system and theirs was based on the notion that the decisions made were made dispassionately and not subject to mob rule or pressure. By publicly ridiculing the Supreme Court, and subjecting them to a standing ovation from the complicit Democrats that surrounded them, Obama demonstrated to everyone how little regard he has for our system. That disregard is in keeping with his Saul Alinsky radicalism and the methods he employed.

Obama, to be sure, is not the first president with a constitutional changing agenda to take on the Supreme Court – nor the most crass about it – at least so far. That dishonor belongs to Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

It is not remembered often enough that FDR's initial New Deal legislation, the National Industrial Recovery Act, not only did not produce economic recovery (government forays into economics rarely do) the Act was unanimously rejected by the Supreme Court in 1935 as unconstitutional! In doing so, the Supreme Court stated that:

"We are told that the provision of the statute authorizing the adoption of codes must be viewed in the light of the grave national crisis with which Congress was confronted . . . Extraordinary conditions may call for extraordinary remedies. But the argument necessarily stops short of an attempt to justify action which lies outside the sphere of constitutional authority."

In other words, as a matter of Constitutional law, the Supreme Court of the early 1930's, bolstered by their brethren that had gone before, believed that our Founders did not authorize a central planning government dictating economic policy. To the contrary, they fought the Revolution to establish a decentralized, limited government that would leave economic development to the newly freed American citizen.

FDR, however, was not interested in such "legalisms." Incredibly, Roosevelt asserted that Americans "cannot seriously be alarmed when they cry 'unconstitutional' at every effort to better the condition of our people." To the contrary, he asserted that "[w]e will no longer be permitted to sacrifice each generation in turn while the law catches up with life."

To combat such tardiness, Roosevelt sought to "reorganize" the United States Court to remove the lone remaining obstacle to his empowerment of government. "He proposed a statute that would give him the power to nominate a new Supreme Court Justice whenever any sitting member reached the age of 70." It was no less than a shot across the bow of the Supreme Court. In time, FDR would accept revisions to his plan but his aim was clear, he wanted a younger, less historically, or constitutionally encumbered, set of minds to approve his transformation of the American government. According to Bruce Ackerman in his worthy book, We The People – Transformations, "[t]he President's Court proposal hit the country like a bombshell."

Ackerman writes that the public debate that ensued "raged on . . . and culminated with addresses by the President . . . [one of which] asked how the Administration could fulfill its campaign commitments to farmers, workers and other groups given judicial resistance to "a progressive solution of our problems."

It was a constitutional show down whose magnitude had not been seen since Marbury v. Madison. But rather than prolong what had become a crisis by all measures by defending our Liberty, two Supreme Court Justices simply and literally switched their vote under the mounting pressure of the times and in the looming shadow of 66 different proposals from politicians to end the impasse. Thereafter, another Justice who had voted against FDR's activist government plans retired and Roosevelt had the newly compliant Supreme Court he wanted and – literally – it suddenly deemed constitutional that which was clearly unconstitutional just a few years before. America would never be the same – and today the New Deal programs threaten our solvency in addition to taking away our freedoms. As you consider all of that, reconsider the rhetoric of this president. Ask yourself if he is historically or constitutionally encumbered? Or whether he will use any means, including ridiculing the Supreme Court to get his way – so that American will never be the same.

Americanism

Submitted by: Michele Daley, Americanism Chairman

I couldn't think of a better article for Americanism this month than this speech by Ronald Reagan. His birthday is this month and this is my first article for our newsletter. Ronald Reagan was the first president I ever voted for and absolutely the best! I sure do miss this guy!

A Time for Choosing

Given as a stump speech, at speaking engagements, and on a memorable night in 1964 in support of Barry Goldwater's presidential campaign. This version is from that broadcast.

I am going to talk of controversial things. I make no apology for this.

It's time we asked ourselves if we still know the freedoms intended for us by the Founding Fathers. James Madison said, "We base all our experiments on the capacity of mankind for self government."

This idea -- that government was beholden to the people, that it had no other source of power -- is still the newest, most unique idea in all the long history of man's relation to man. This is the issue of this election: Whether we believe in our capacity for self-government or whether we abandon the American Revolution and confess that a little intellectual elite in a far-distant capital can plan our lives for us better than we can plan them ourselves.

You and I are told we must choose between a left or right, but I suggest there is no such thing as a left or right. There is only an up or down. Up to man's age-old dream--the maximum of individual freedom consistent with order -- or down to the ant heap of totalitarianism. Regardless of their sincerity, their humanitarian motives, those who would sacrifice freedom for security have embarked on this downward path. Plutarch warned, "The real destroyer of the liberties of the people is he who spreads among them bounties, donations and benefits."

The Founding Fathers knew a government can't control the economy without controlling people. And they knew when a government sets out to do that, it must use force and coercion to achieve its purpose. So we have come to a time for choosing.

Public servants say, always with the best of intentions, "What greater service we could render if only we had a little more money and a little more power." But the truth is that outside of its legitimate function, government does nothing as well or as economically as the private sector.

Yet any time you and I question the schemes of the do-gooders, we're denounced as being opposed to their humanitarian goals. It seems impossible to legitimately debate their solutions with the assumption that all of us share the desire to help the less fortunate. They tell us we're always "against," never "for" anything.

We are for a provision that destitution should not follow unemployment by reason of old age, and to that end we have accepted Social Security as a step toward meeting the problem. However, we are against those entrusted with this program when they practice deception regarding its fiscal shortcomings, when they charge that any criticism of the program means that we want to end payments....

We are for aiding our allies by sharing our material blessings with nations which share our fundamental beliefs, but we are against doling out money government to government, creating bureaucracy, if not socialism, all over the world.

We need true tax reform that will at least make a start toward restoring for our children the American Dream that wealth is denied to no one, that each individual has the right to fly as high as his strength and ability will take him.... But we cannot have such reform while our tax policy is engineered by people who view the tax as a means of achieving changes in our social structure....

Have we the courage and the will to face up to the immorality and discrimination of the progressive tax, and demand a return to traditional proportionate taxation? . . . Today in our country the tax collector's share is 37 cents of every dollar earned. Freedom has never been so fragile, so close to slipping from our grasp.

Are you willing to spend time studying the issues, making yourself aware, and then conveying that information to family and friends? Will you resist the temptation to get a government handout for your community? Realize that the doctor's fight against socialized medicine is your fight. We can't socialize the doctors without socializing the patients. Recognize that government invasion of public power is eventually an assault upon your own business. If some among you fear taking a stand because you are afraid of reprisals from customers, clients, or even government, recognize that you are just feeding the crocodile hoping he'll eat you last.

If all of this seems like a great deal of trouble, think what's at stake. We are faced with the most evil enemy mankind has known in his long climb from the swamp to the stars. There can be no security anywhere in the free world if there is no fiscal and economic stability within the United States. Those who ask us to trade our freedom for the soup kitchen of the welfare state are architects of a policy of accommodation.

They say the world has become too complex for simple answers. They are wrong. There are no easy answers, but there are simple answers. We must have the courage to do what we know is morally right. Winston Churchill said that "the destiny of man is not measured by material computation. When great forces are on the move in the world, we learn we are spirits--not animals." And he said, "There is something going on in time and space, and beyond time and space, which, whether we like it or not, spells duty." You and I have a rendezvous with destiny. We will preserve for our children this, the last best hope of man on earth, or we will sentence them to take the first step into a thousand years of darkness. If we fail, at least let our children and our children's children say of us we justified our brief moment here. We did all that could be done.
